Dates Sept. 2008 – present

Occupation or position held Independent professional : research and development (individuals, teams and families)

Main activities and responsibilities

More than coaching

Nowadays we need to be particularly creative, since all known methods have been proving their major limits in answering the new challenges. Therefore I created an original, unique on the market and very complex method, which I call multidisciplinary coaching-style lifelong learning.

This method is research-based on creative, in-depth, guided analysis of client's everyday experience, and interweaves principles and techniques from executive coaching and life coaching with consultancy, training and mentoring, depending on clients' needs and choices.

It benefits from scientific knowledge coming from several social sciences: sociology, anthropology, social psychology, sciences of education, sciences of family, childhood studies.

For individuals: career boost; work and personal life balance; time management; stress management; constructive communication; making public presentations; self-discovery and personal development.

For organizations: leadership; team communication and cooperation; research-based motivation.

For families: communication; couple relationships; parenting.

More than 1500 hours of direct work with people from banking, IT, justice, health, education, administration, agriculture.

More than 200 articles written and made public in reviews and personal site.
